

Anthem For Doomed Youth

Howards Alias

Something snapped in me today, I didn't see it there.
I would like nothing more than to destroy this face you wear.

I love you.

It's been six days since I saw you break down,
This regret stacked up and then all fell out,
You watched and stared, a face I'll
Wear for as long as I can remember.

Did you wish upon my star to fall down from the sky?
I can't believe I just sat there, not moving at all.

I love you.

It's been six days since I saw you break down,
This regret stacked up and then all fell out,
You watched and stared, a face I'll
Wear for as long as I can remember.

It's been six days since you saw me break down,
This burden's hold built up and all crashed down,
You watched with despair, fixating your stare,
A face I'll never forget.

It's been six days since I saw you break down,
This regret stacked up and then all fell out,
You watched and stared, a face I'll
Wear for as long as I can remember.

It's been six days since you saw me break down,
This burden's hold built up and all crashed down,
You watched with despair, fixating your stare,
A face I'll never forget,
And always I cannot erase from my mind
How I treated you so unkind,
And now you're gone.
