

Nothing but a Stranger

Hudson Taylor

I never thought to question why you would ever tell a lie
I believed in every word from you
But looking back with open eyes even at the best of times
You were always dancing around the truth

Oh God I could swear you would always be there
Til the end, the end
I wouldn't go back to that shade of black again

Now you're nothing but a stranger you were so familiar
I don't even know you now
And if I ever saw you would I walk right past you?
Nothing but a stranger now

I don't recognise the past I see you in a photograph
All the colour turning into Grey
I've been living with the fear that if you were to reappear
There wouldn't really be that much to say

You used to swear you'd always be there til the end, the end
Let's face the fact you're not coming back again, again

Now you're nothing but a stranger you were so familiar
I don't even know you now
And if I ever saw you Would I walk right past you?
Nothing but a stranger now

Oh oh oh oh oh oh
I'm letting go, I'm letting go

Now you're nothing but a stranger you were so familiar
I don't even know you now
And if I ever saw you you would I walk right past you?
Nothing but a stranger now
Oh nothing but a stranger now
Oh nothing but a stranger now
