

Replicate

Hundred Reasons

And why do you
Always seem to replicate?
It always seems to put me back to the start
And could you be
The only one to demonstrate
By turning your forgiveness into art?

The first time you
Called me out I couldn't shake
The disappointed look I found in your eyes
When I'm at fault
I only seem to navigate
My way to those moments that go and break your heart

And I'm yearning
To be more like you
But I'm turning
Away from what's true
So I'm hoping
That it won't be through
The longest tunnel ever
That only leads to why
I'm yearning
To be more like you
But I'm turning
Away from what's true
So I'm hoping
That it won't be through
The longest tunnel ever
That only leads to a dead end

And why do you
Tell me there's a time and place
To raise my voice when I just act like a child?
The last point made
Never seems to resonate
It always seems to put me back to the start

And I'm yearning
To be more like you
But I'm turning
Away from what's true
So I'm hoping
That it won't be through
The longest tunnel ever
That only leads to why
I'm yearning
To be more like you
But I'm turning
Away from what's true
So I'm hoping
That it won't be through
The longest tunnel ever
That only leads to a dead end

The longest tunnel ever
That only leads to a dead end