Diminish Me

Imperative Reaction

they can't hear me now my screams dig inward to the core and my voice betrays my reason i can't listen anymore to the words i once believed in i have nothing more to say they've been silenced to whispers and hung with threads of shame if you came here to save me you walked in too slow there is nothing left but burnt remains of what i was two years ago to reconcile my damaged mind would take more than you have to give there's nothing left but ruined dreams that diminish all i am

my screams resound throughout my world and my words betray my reason i can't listen anymore for the lies i once believed in i have nothing but contempt they tore apart my life and left me lying here alone

you can't hear me when i needed you, you walked away you diminished me with every word you said
you can't hear me
i'm no longer here for you you diminished me every time you let me down
