

Afterthought

In Fear and Faith

I'm resting my eyes so I can see you clearly,
When I leave you shaking and barely breathing.

This sudden love oh so picture perfect,
That I got to know you.
A dream come true,
Turns into a nightmare.
I can't believe
That I thought you were the one
But that head of yours has got to go,
That's why you came undone.

No more diamonds, it's over,
It's time for you to go.
I'm sorry it had to,
but we both know.

Once everything is said and done
You'll be my afterthought,
Cause I only want to see you
Long enough to make you hurt.
(Long enough to make you hurt!)

You can hold on,
You if you say it isn't so.
But tomorrow will be gone before you know.

Turn around, walk away, and never come back!

Don't you dare ever think that I care for you,
I've got my friends and my family to get me through!

I see that you're changing,
From the one I knew,
To the one I'm used to.

And I know you're changing,
From the one I know,
To the one I don't!

Once everything is said and done
You'll be my afterthought,
Cause I only want to see you
Long enough to make you hurt.

You can hold on,
You if you say it isn't so.
But tomorrow will be gone before you know.