

Collapse

In Her Own Words

Quiet on the drive home, old habits knocking all my lights out
It used to be so entertaining. Why does it feel like suffocating?

All of the fire that's burning inside me
Is starting to go out. It used to burn but feels so cold now

I'm so sick of running away from all the mistakes
And ignoring things I'm too scared to face
I always thought that I'd be the one
To fix things when they collapse

Self destructive when I'm alone with all this nervous energy
It's too hard, I can't get through this
It's nothing new. I always do this
I can't believe I let it get the best of me
I'll take a different route (A different fucking route)
My feet are tired cause I'm always

Running away from all the mistakes
And ignoring things I'm too scared to face
I always thought that I'd be the one
To fix things when they collapse

(Quiet on the drive home)

I'm running away from all the mistakes
(Old habits knocking all my lights out)
And ignoring things I'm too scared to face
I always thought that I'd be the one
(Knocking all my lights out)
To fix things when they collapse