

You try to play down the past
But all these scars, they prove you wrong
So much in common, too fast
Unite and blind - we feel so strong

But then they enter your mind and try to capture your heart
Be careful what you say: it's not the game you used to play
Close to the edge, constricted by fate
You choose to push the button and my heart detonates

Your spinning thoughts are blocking a view of open skies
Reality has glued a tear into the corner of your eyes
How, how can I stop - losing so much time
How, how can I stop - this longing wish to make you mine

You better swallow the pain
There're parts of you, nobody knows
Your blood is raising your vein
You feel the end has come too close

But then they enter your mind and try to capture your heart
Be careful what you say: it's not the game you used to play
For you love was a scepter and pride was your crown
You still keep them like treasures, but they just bring you down

Your spinning thoughts are blocking a view of open skies
Reality has glued a tear into the corner of your eyes
How, how can I stop - losing so much time
How, how can I stop - this longing wish to make you mine

Time heal, I pray to myself
While something numb replaces agony
But time's a wound in itself
That will affect adversely

But then they enter my mind and try to capture my heart
So careful what to say: it's not the game I used to play
In vain they observe me, reconstructing my schemes
They may change the medication, but you still rule my dreams

Your spinning thoughts are blocking a view of open skies
Reality has glued a tear into the corner of your eyes
How, how can I stop - losing so much time
How, how can I stop - this longing wish to make you mine
