

Bending the Rules

Infernal

On a Saturday night
You throw yourself away for the night
You call me up to join the fight
You know that you can always count on me
For now it's alright
We're floating through the sea of the crowd
Been doing this forever, haven't we?
Just us, just you and me

But you're bending the rules
So they fit your life
And it cuts like a knife and I try and I try
To act normal
In the daylight we turn into nothing
When you're bending the rules
So they fit your lies
And you're colder than ice, yeah you don't even try
To act normal
In your world, don't you care that we're nothing?

And in a silent room
I give myself away to the gloom
Convince myself, I'm healing the wounds
Tell myself some lies of what we are
And I'm not feeling alright
Suffering from Saturday night
Know better than to text or to call
Nothing is new and that don't help at all

Cause you're bending the rules
So they fit your life
And it cuts like a knife and I try and I try
To act normal
In the daylight we turn into nothing
Yeah you're bending the rules
So they fit your lies
And you're colder than ice and you don't even try
To act normal
In your world, don't you care that we're nothing?

Yeah you're bending the rules
So they fit your lies
And you're colder than ice and you don't even try
To act normal
In your world, don't you care that we're nothing?
