

A Ghost On The East Coast

Into It. Over It.

Lost my patience
Outside a train station
Somewhere south of Massachusetts
Along with all the uses for my hands

Back on track twenty-nine
And I'm on the wrong side of the shoreline
And you're nowhere in sight
Just the sodium glare from the platform lights

Miles away and without home
Breathless and relentless
And no trace of anyone