False Meridian

Invent, Animate

Take me back to where this started
Before you split me into a nightmare divided
Paralyzed by shadows and its blinding me
Far from the surface
I didn't choose to stay asleep
Nothing is permanent
So what face do I choose today?

If I'm forced to stay
And my heart is stained
Could they push me through?
(Through this pain)

Fall on me amber moon
Holding the weight
Knowing my face in ever bloom
Fall on me amber moon
Don't feel the same in disarray
Can you find myself in me?

Where can I reconnect the shattered pieces in my head?
And I'll forgive myself

The weight will crush me
The weight will crush me
The pain only separates
No break in the torment
To be able to feel the severed heart

Several faces used to speak
With only two eyes to see
I'll see the cycle break
When the hereafter swallows me

Fall on me amber moon
In heaven old, you look the same
As the winds carry your name
Fall on me amber moon
Holding the weight
Knowing my face in ever bloom
Fall on me amber moon
Don't feel the same in disarray
Can you find myself in me?

Nights quiet, with only one to witness the agony
Nights quiet, nothing is permanent
So what face do I choose today?

Nights quiet, with only one to witness the agony
