

Ghost

Jacob Lee

Ghost, I see you standing there
Don't turn away, I want you to stay
Ghost, what's your name?
Why so surprised? I'm interested

You're just a soul that blends into the crowd
I hear you so loud no one else hears a sound
You reach out your hand no one else feels a thing
And I'm just a stranger who could be a friend

You could have been so great
I won't let you slip away
Is there any hope for us left
Even a ghost needs a friend

You could have been someone
But you let them into your head
I want you to know this instead
That I see the light in your chest

Ghost, where you from?
I can take you away, so far away
Ghost, I'll make sure they all see
The kind of man, that you can be

Open your lungs and inhale my words
I see in your eyes a reflection of hurt
The book in your mind hasn't come to an end
There's always a page that hasn't been read

You could have been so great
I won't let you slip away
Is there any hope for us left
Even a ghost needs a friend

You could have been someone
But you let them into your head
I want you to know this instead
That I see the light in your chest

Your heart, it beats, forever, forever, we see
I will believe that there's a ghost in me
Your lungs, they breathe, forever, forever, we see
I will believe