

Sorrow

Jacob Lee

She left a thousand tears upon my bedspread
A couple thoughts, a box of regrets
Full of memories that we shared
I left a single kiss upon her forehead
A selfish heart out by the doorstep
And carved a chasm into her chest

I
I wonder whether she knows
That I am imperfect
I wonder where the time goes
In her uncertainty
I wonder, if I let go
Would she return to me?

Sorrow is all I see
I try to breathe but I
Never seem to find
The will to take one more
Stay with me
And help me grieve
'Cause I, honestly
Have never needed someone more

She wept, slid out past inside the cabinet
Kissed my shoulder out of habit
Asked if this had really happened

Now I
I wonder whether she knows
That I think she's perfect
I wonder where the time goes
In an eternity
I wonder, if I let go
Would she return to me?

Sorrow is all I see
I try to breathe but I
Never seem to find
The will to take one more
Stay with me
And help me grieve
'Cause I, honestly
Have never needed someone more
Someone more
Someone more
Someone more

Sorrow is all I see
I try to breathe but I
Never seem to find
The will to take one more
Stay with me
And help me grieve
'Cause I, honestly
Have never needed someone more
