Your voice has cradled me to sleep for twenty years or somethin g

A friend that lives in the TV

To them you'd never be a person with a drinking problem

You're just a man behind a screen

And I was jealous that Joey was your roommate
But in the real world you just lived by yourself
And by the time someone found you, it was too late
It got too much and you chose heaven over hell

So when the rain starts to pour, I'll be thinking of you
So no one ever told you life would be this way Rewind the scene where they were singing "I'll Be There" for yo u

Why was no one there for you?

You hid your pain behind a mask they called your sense of humou r

It's torment when the laughter ends
And all the publications speculating mostly rumours
Now they pretend to be your friends

And by the time someone found you it was too late
It got too much and you chose heaven over hell
And all the lighters we hold up won't ease the sadness
'Cause in the end, all that we need is someone's help

So when the rain starts to pour, I'll be thinking of you
So no one ever told you life would be this way
Rewind the scene where they were singing "I'll Be There" for yo
u

Why was no one there for you?

Could I be any more sorry there's a world without you?
So no one ever warned me life could end that way Rewind the scene where they were singing "I'll Be There" for yo
u

Why was no one there for you?

So when the rain starts to pour, I'll be thinking of you
So no one ever told you life would be this way
Rewind the scene where they were singing "I'll Be There" for yo
u

Why was no one there for you?
