

For A Moment

James Hersey

Laying in your bed, shadows overhead
And it's time for sleep
Think of what he said, every tear you shed
And the prize he keeps

I don't understand, how you take his hand
How you trust his words
You say you're fine again, but it's no different
And I know it hurts

As you lay there waiting
The hourglass it fills
The silence is sedating
And it kills

Oooo what can I do
Up against you
And your stubborn frown?

Laying in my bed, shadows overhead
And I'm trying, I'm trying to sleep
Think of what I said, every tear you shed
And the pride that you keep

As you lay thee waiting
The hourglass it fills
The silence is sedating
And it kills

Oooo what can I do
Up against you
And your stubborn frown?
Oooo what can I do
To turn you upside down?

So when you're tired of waiting
And the hourglass stands still
And you think for a moment this could be better
And it will
Cause you called me and I'm waiting
Beneath your windowsill
I promised that I'd catch you
And I will