

Right Now

Jamie Grace

You text and call him
But he don't answer
Maybe he's busy but you don't let you mind wander

Cause when you see him
He's always smiling
If you could only forget how he treats when he's not bored

He don't introduce you to his friends
Certainly not his mama
You're too old for playing games
But there's something bout the drama

He don't want a future
He just want right now
But tell me what kind of a queen would trade in royalty
For a one night crown

It's no good to be lonely
But I'd rather see you alone
Than with a boy who wants you in his room
But doesn't care about your home

If he don't want a future
Why give him right now

He says you're pretty
But it's only
When he wants something that he don't even deserve and

You know your value
Is more than diamonds
He's a jeweler only worried about profits

He don't introduce you to his friends
Certainly not his mama
You're too old for playing games
But there's something bout the drama

He don't want a future
He just want right now
But tell me what kind of a queen would trade in royalty
For a one night crown

It's no good to be lonely
But I'd rather see you alone
Than with a boy who wants you in his room
But doesn't care about your home

If he don't want a future
Why give him right now

For every girl who ever needs an older optimist
Staying up late fighting with the past or present tense
For dreamers who have diaries of days with darling destinies
Your yesterday is not the end
And you're more than where you've been

If he don't want a future
Why give him right now