

Cold

Jamie Lawson

It must have been cold
Enough to see your breath on the sky
Enough to see the truth in the lie
Enough to see them passing us by, passing us by

I can't look you in the eye for the fireworks on display
'Cause the light that reflects in your eyes is the light they took away
Stole your soul now all I know is the nightmare that we craved
I can't wake up to wake you up, to wake you up to say

It's cold
Cold enough to hold and huddle close
Cold enough to fear what you fear most
Your breath an empty ghost, an empty ghost, an empty ghost

I can't look you in the eye for the fireworks on display
'Cause the light that reflects in your eyes is the light they took away
Stole your soul now all I know is the nightmare that we craved
I can't wake up to wake you up, to wake you up to say

Don't give up, don't give up, it's not over
Don't give up, don't give up, it's not over

It's cold enough to see your breath on my breath
Enough to know you're all I have left

I can't look you in the eye for the fireworks on display
'Cause the light that reflects in your eyes is the light they took away
Stole your soul now all I know is the nightmare that we craved
And I can't wake up to wake you up. to wake you up to say

Don't give up, don't give up
It's not over, it's not over
Don't give up

It must have been cold enough to see your breath on the sky
Enough to see the truth in the lie
