

Moving In

Jamie Lawson

I've got a house, it's been left to stand through
Two world wars and some ice
I've got a room that feels too long
Since the last love here said goodbye
I've got a view, it looks to the old [?]
Doesn't know how to stay still

There's a feeling that I never want
Still don't and I never will
Here's a question
That I should've asked you long ago
Something that I need to know
Does someone else live in your heart
'Cause I wouldn't mind moving in

I wouldn't mind staying a while
And I wouldn't mind hearing you sing
And I wouldn't mind making you smile
No, I wouldn't mind moving in

This house, it needs renovation
Oh, it needs entire [?]
It needs someone to tear down the walls that it built
That are crumbling beyond hell

This garden, grown a little wild
It could do with some common ground
Underneath where the flowers once grew now
Is just torn up and cracked
Here's a question
I should've asked you long ago
Something that I need to know
Does someone else live in your heart
'Cause I wouldn't mind moving in

I wouldn't mind staying a while
And I wouldn't mind hearing you sing
And I wouldn't mind making you smile
No, I wouldn't mind moving in

I wouldn't mind making a brand new story
I wouldn't mind falling apart
And I wouldn't mind hearing you sing
I wouldn't mind moving in
Oh, no, oh, no
If you stay I wouldn't mind moving in
I wouldn't mind making a brand new story
I wouldn't mind falling apart
And I wouldn't mind hearing you sing
And I wouldn't mind hearing you sing
I wouldn't mind moving in
