

Where Are You Now (TD's Song)

Jamie McDell

Where, oh where are you now?
Are you strolling on those purple-orange clouds
Are you pacing past the tides
Are you standing by my side
Where are you now?

Can't say I've been one for feeling open
To the quiet bells or looking to the sky
But lately I've been tired and a little broken
Wondering how to really say goodbye

When just last week we spoke about the ocean
And how your brothers rarely saw you cry
And I must say I took it as a token
Another gift of words and glass of wine

Where, oh where are you now
Are you walking through the trees outside of town
On a mountain way up high
Are you standing by my side
Where are you now?

And I know that you loved a snowy mountain
Solitude and living from the land
Sparkle in her eye and never doubting
She would be the one to take your hand

Where oh where are you now
Are you shouting all the boys another round
Are you in the tears we cry
Are you standing by her side
Where are you now

And I know that you loved to tell a story
But never cared to tell us what we know
If one thing I know true
We'll be looking out for you
With the whiskey, gently smiling as we go
