

Otherside

Janet Devlin

Bled through your darkest days
Through the darkest of nights
I know it's hard to see
Through the tears that you've cried

But you made it through those days
And did it all on your own
I know you've changed your ways
I know your roots have grown

And everything tastes better
And the world seems brighter
On the other side
And the grass is greener
And your head is clearer
On the other side

On the other side, you'll make it through
To the other side, an ocean of blue
And I know, and I know, and I know it's waiting there for you
On the other side, the other side

It's time to erase regret
And set sail from your sorrow
Time to forgive and forget
And be free for tomorrow

'Cause the past is the past
And the present's a gift
So don't you forget
Don't you forget
Don't you forget how to live

And everything tastes better
And the world seems brighter
On the other side
And the grass is greener
And your head is clearer
On the other side

On the other side, you'll make it through
To the other side, an ocean of blue
And I know, and I know, and I know it's waiting there for you
On the other side, the other side

I know it's hard but you can never let it pull you under
I know you feel trapped within time
Forget how it feels to have the world go and lose its wonder
Remember where you started

On the other side, you'll make it through
To the other side, an ocean of blue
And I know, and I know, and I know it's waiting there for you
On the other side, the other side
On the other side
On the other, on the other, the other side
