

Colorblind

Jayden Bartels

I live life through a lie for a long time
Cause your love made me colorblind
Deep down I knew that we were right
But all the red flags were black and white

How was I supposed to know you're toxic when I can't see clearly?
How was I supposed to know you didn't love me when you told me differently?

Cause your love made me colorblind
I missed out on all rainbows and starry nights
Yes your love filled my skies with clouds
And your thunder was far too loud

Now that I'm here I can look back
How could I stay after you treated me like that You made me think that it was a normal thing, but It's not normal to cry yourself to sleep

How was I supposed to know you're toxic when I can't see clearly?
How was I supposed to know you didn't love me when you told me differently?

Cause your love made me colorblind
I missed out on all rainbows and starry nights
Yes your love filled my skies with clouds
And your thunder was far too loud

My eyes are finally open now that you're not here
For the first time in forever, I can see clear

That your love made me colorblind
I missed out on all rainbows and starry nights
Yes your love filled my skies with clouds
And your thunder was far too loud
