

Fragments

Jaymes Young

It's a new chance, a new day
Avoiding the thought of, you coming over
Yeah
I've been drafted into your war
I feel shafted waking up, on your shoulders once again
I never really let you go
Just thought that you should know
Even though you broke my bones
Your soul is where I made my home, my home, my home

You were looking for another way out
Try to fix these broken things
All we had were fragments
You were stumbling a new way down
Falling on your broken wings
All we had were fragments

Aw man, I guess that's it

Can't blame it all on you
Can't blame it all on me
We were too young to try to start a family
Of our own, of our own, of our own
It's too bad you finally
Came to your senses
I won't hear a damn sentence
Out of your mouth, out of your mouth

And it's hard looking back
Knowing what I could have done
I'm never going back
I'm always on the run
And you never really find
The pieces that you leave behind
All I got from this mess, was fragments

Fragments
Oh