

2 White Roses

Jeff Bridges

I'm looking at the earth
From a million miles away
I see a tiny speck of dust
Twinkling little spot of floating light
Barely visible in infinite space
Hanging suspended in the vast eternal light

I don't see tears
I don't see cars
I don't hear the music play
Just an endless kind of silence
From a million miles away
And all our heartbreaking scenes
And all our soul searching dreams
Are less than small
I left her two white roses in the hall

I'm looking at the earth
From a million miles away
It is impossible to tell
If it's night or it's day
It's just the tiny little jewel
The diamond of space
A twinkling piece of glitter
It sort of marks the place I used to know

I don't see war
I don't see peace
I don't see people on the move
It's just an endless kind of stillness
From a million miles away
And all our heartbreaking scenes
And all our soul searching dreams
Are less than small
I left her two white roses in the hall

I'm looking at the earth
From a million miles away
I wonder Is the singer still singing?
Do the children there still play?
I wonder will she start to miss me
When she sees that I have gone?
If tears will fall

I left her two white roses in the hall
I left her two white roses in the hall
