

Really Gone

Jelly Roll

In the silence I can hear you, in the night sky I can see you
Didn't then, now I believe you, that it ain't the end
Even though I can't be near you, I still feel you holding on
Just because you left, don't mean you're really gone

Yeah, we had a good thing, didn't we?
And now we out here running different streets
I'm afraid to even try to drink the whiskey neat
I pour one out for the monster inside of me
Riding through the southside, didn't know
You was there before I had anyone
I never thought you'd leave so soon
Memories in the drawer up in my bedroom
I used to hate God sometimes
And I still do some nights
When I'm trying to make it make sense
Staring up, having conversations

In the silence I can hear you, in the night sky I can see you
Didn't then, now I believe you, that it ain't the end
Even though I can't be near you, I still feel you holding on

How do I explain that I'm still fucked up 'bout you?
I wish I could move on, but I don't know how to 'Member riding 'round north Atlanta till around 2?
That felt like the last time that my feet were on the ground to o
Ever since then, I feel like I float, float, float, float
Ever since then, I just been on go, go, go, go
I thought you'd never disappear, I was wrong
But to be honest, girl, you ain't really gone
I wonder where you at right now
But then, I look and realize you're all around
Oh, you're all around me, yeah

In the silence I can hear you, in the night sky I can see you
Didn't then, now I believe you, that it ain't the end
Even though I can't be near you, I still feel you holding on
