

Fallen

Jennifer Knapp

Even though they say we have fallen
Doesn't mean that I won't do it twice
And given every second chance
I choose again to be with you tonight

"Sorry" is often told but hardly ever done
Not with you my love, not with you my love
All the ancient stories that hold a bitter end
Not with you my friend, not with you my friend

I lift you up like a loving cup
Pour down on all the world
And if the fable's strong enough
We'll drink more than our fare

Even though they say we have fallen
Doesn't mean that I won't do it twice
And given every second chance
I choose again to be with you tonight

So the wind blows cold
I say it's crisp and clear
All for you my dear, all for you my dear
And though the clouds roll by
I say that in the end the sky is a blazing sun
Wait, here it comes
I lift you up like a loving cup
Pour down on all the world
And if the fable's strong enough
We'll drink more than our fare

Even though they say we have fallen
Doesn't mean that I won't do it twice
And given every second chance
I choose again to be with you tonight

If all that's left behind
All the pieces that they find
Are the two of us
Or from a wild, wild lust

They'll lift us up like a loving cup
Pour down on all the world
And if the fable's strong enough
We'll drink more than our fare

Even though they say we have fallen
Doesn't mean that I won't do it twice
And given every second chance
I choose again to be with you tonight
Oh, given every second chance
I choose again to be with you tonight
