When You Are Near

Jeremy Camp

There's no need to say a thing, When I'm before you in this silence I feel refreshed with peace Break this noise that binds the voice That tries speak open up my eyes to see Your gracious sovereign reach

It's hard to talk when I feel that you are near, When all is quiet it's the beauty that I hear, This hidden place where I know that you calm my fears I know that you've washed my tears

The seasons of change I've faced Have never left me wounded Only scars of hurt But never deeply rooted This healing I have felt No burden can replace Redemptive hope has been the story of my pain

All is lost without the breath of life you give And you give so much I want nothing more than you so here's my heart
