

A Few Seasons

Jess Williamson

Our friends could see it from a thousand miles away
That's how far you moved from our house, we knew you couldn't stay
I was admired for my patience and my strength
I am well-known for being so ok

Our life and our love slowly slipped away
We put it all into the songs, there's nothing left to save
Now every time we sing along, we resurrect the way
The fire moved the fire as the night moves into day
The fire moved the fire and the fire burned away

We rolled the waves for a few seasons
A leaking ship tossing in the wind
Deep in the cabinet of my heart
The rooms I kept for you will remain dark

I remember moving in your field under the stars
Always interrupted, too many false starts
Why didn't you yearn for me like any man should?
You were the only one for me, am I no good?

How I did accommodate and get so small
Step so far out of the way now nothing's there at all
Step so far out of the way now nothing's there at all
Step so far out of the way now nothing's there at all