

'Til The Next Time

Jimmy Barnes

Hear a pounding in my head my heart is beating
As I lie awake at night here in my bed
And I just can't stop this pain that I am feeling
And I just can't shake this awful sense of dread
With my hand, I touch your hair while you are sleeping
And I listen close so I can hear you breathe
And I pray to God you're never gonna leave me
And I close my eyes again and try to sleep

When you wake up to the morning sun, you're smiling
And the dark night's just a memory from the past
Then you put your hand in mine, and everything feels fine
Till the next time (till the next time)
Oh, till the next time

There's a green light on the clock that burns right through me
And it's saying that it's twenty-five past three
There's a wind that's blowing hard outside the doorway
And a feeling in my heart won't let me be
As we drive on down the road, the windshield's wiping
And all the while the radio's soft and low
And I see something in your eyes as the rain outside subsides
And I tell that pain inside, it's time to go

When you wake up to the morning sun, you're smiling
And the dark night's just a memory from the past
And then you put your hand in mine, and everything feels fine
Till the next time (till the next time)
Oh, till the next time

With my hand, I touch your hair while you are sleeping
And I listen close so I can hear you breathe
And I pray to God you're never gonna leave me
And I close my eyes again and try to sleep

When you wake up to the morning sun, you're smiling
And the dark night's just a memory from the past
Then you put your hand in mine, and everything feels fine
Till the next time (till the next time)
Oh, till the next time
Mmh, till the next time
