Your Letter

Joan Armatrading

I read your letter yesterday If fell between the covers And my bare skin It fell between my crying And my longing for you

I loved this one Too long This one much to much Sometimes I gave just enough of myself But most times nothing at all

And you've been gone Too long You know I love you the best You call me crazy That's how you won my heart 'Cos you were half crazy too

I read your letter again today Out loud And to myself It gave me back my sanity I didn't feel so alone

Won't be too soon Not like the night Not like the night on a summer's day Can't wait to see you step across the room Empty room Save you and me I feel your touches in your letters But it's not half as good as you touching me In real
