

I Was Everyone

Joan as Police Woman

I ran into the night
'Cause it's all I had
My feet swept past the midnight
Where the reeds grow wild
I looked into the sky
Felt the ages collide
And the wind
I heard it call my name

Said, girl you are the chosen one
You'll make history
So, go, go rally the men
And make them listen
And you will feel the tides turn for you
You will read the eyes of your enemies

With that, that voice was gone
And I stood alone
Had I received a message
From beyond the stone
And why would it be me
I have nothing of worth
Were the voices just my vanity

Said, girl you are the chosen one
You'll make history
So, go, go rally the men
And make them listen
And you will feel the tides turn for you
You will read the eyes of your enemies

And what if I woke up tomorrow not afraid
I could decide to trust the voices and take courage
What if I woke up tomorrow being brave
I could decide to trust the universe, take courage
I could decide and what if I tried

For a moment I could feel it
I could feel it, I could feel it
For a moment I was everyone
Who had never been quiet
How would I spend my whole life
Knowing the message
If I knew they made it through to me
I could not run and hide

And I know everyone wants to be remembered
And I know everyone wants to be a star
But who will believe that they're worth it
Who will believe they've got the right
To stand up and be heard

We are the champions
We are the champions
We are the champions...
