

I Am Bones

Joe Brooks

When will these tears stop?

When will this heartbreak mend?

When will the picture of your face not be engraved inside my head?

How does one move on?

Stop pacing up these floors

How can I let go of all that I adore?

Call me foolish, call me strange

Call me clueless I don't care anymore

The only thing I'm guilty of is still believing in us

All is fallen, all is changed

One man broken standing at your door

I am bones now there's nothing more

When are the air clears leaves anger in its wake

Will you remember me for the good or for all of my mistakes?

No there were never words we left unspoken, no plate that went unbroken

But what kind of love with velvet gloves will ever feel the same?

Call me foolishness, call me strange

Call me clueless I don't care anymore

The only thing I'm guilty of is still believing in us

All is fallen, all is changed

One man broken standing at your door

I am bones now there's nothing more

What I wouldn't give for one last time

What if there was something left worth fighting for?

Call me foolish, call me strange

God knows you've called me every other name

But I don't care anymore, I don't care

All is fallen, all is changed

One man broken standing at your door

I am bones now there's nothing more

I am bones now

I am bones
