

Stormy Weather Once Again

Joe Diffie

How much lonesome can the wind blow in?
How much sadness can the gray sky cry?
Don't know where all that sunshine went
Since you said goodbye

Crashing waves from an ocean blue
Scattered footprints of the love we knew
Thunder shut me from deep within
Stormy weather once again

When the wind dies down and you have found
A new place to stay tonight
I hope that all your sunny days
Won't bring tears to your eyes

How much lonesome can the wind blow in?
How much sadness can the gray sky cry?
Don't know where all that sunshine went
Stormy weather once again

If it ever breaks the stars will take
The twinkling in the night
And the heart that once was broken in two
Can get back to feeling right

How much lonesome can the wind blow in?
How much sadness can the gray sky cry?
Don't know where all that sunshine went
Since you said goodbye

Crashing waves from an ocean blue
Scattered footprints of the love we knew
Thunder shut me from deep within
Stormy weather once again

Thunder shut me from deep within
Stormy weather once again