

Just Come Home With Me Tonight

Joeseef

Walk past me on the stairs
You didn't see me there
Pretend I didn't care
Of course I still care

But I'm drunk enough to play the game
I lean in and you move away
But you linger all the same
And I can't help myself but say

But I know a kiss won't make it right
And there's no future left in sight
But I got no false hope in my mind
But would you just come home with me tonight?

Pieces of my soul
Are burning in my throat
He's lighting up your phone
You're here, but you're already gone

Still I'm drunk enough to play the game
I lean in and you move away
But I still love you all the same
That's why I can't help myself but say

Well, I know a kiss won't make it right
And there's no future left in sight
But I got no false hope in my mind
But would you just come home with me tonight?

The light has finally left your eyes
Where we once flew in summer skies
And you were holding me so tight
Will you just come home with me tonight?

'Cause I know a kiss won't make it right
And there's no future left in sight
But I got no false hope in my mind
So would you just come home with me tonight?
But I know a kiss won't make it right
And there's no future left in sight
But I got no false hope in my mind
So would you just come home with me tonight?

Would you just come home with me?
