Second Walk

John Frusciante

I take a second walk Down the street of fame I've paid it off and paid for it again All these miserable feelings never end But to fall and be down is something I transcend I've been a meal of mine And slid down my throat And all I'm facing is one more way to go Died so many times and then I reappeared All death looks like to me is a word that causes fear I'm taking my place In a world with a different space No time at all except how you move Be who you are Do what you do Not win or lose
