

You're the Only Song I Sing Today

Johnny Paycheck

I was born to say the things I have to say
Some of us are lucky enough to be that way
I found a phrase in every face of yesterday
But honey you're the only song I sing today

I tried to find a word to rhyme with everything
And place it in a song that I could always sing
You just didn't happen you were dreamed this way
And honey you're the only song I sing today

There's some kinda power somewhere out of sight
And it let's a poet know it when he said it right
Like so many I've come close a time or two
But all my lines I find were leading me to you

I remember finding you a melody
Somewhere in the notes you wrote inside of me
And it was tailored just to fit some words I had to say
And honey you're the only song I sing today

There's some kinda power somewhere out of sight
And it let's a poet know it when he said it right
Like so many I've come close a time or two
But all my lines I find were leading me to you

Yes I remember finding you a melody
I don't know I found it somewhere in the notes you wrote inside of me
And it was tailored just to fit some words I had to say
And honey you're the only song I sing today
Yes you're the only song I'll ever sing
