

Broken Hearted

Jon McLaughlin

That look in your eye was the reason I wasn't leavin'
The words that I had yet to say kept me standin' still We nervously laughed as we widened the gap that our silence
Had already filled

Sometimes a moment can change when you hold it too tightly
And I know I remember that night the way it never was
And all I needed was some guarantee that my heart would not do what it does and break us up and

Every moment that comes can be disregarded
You'll never love someone 'til you're broken hearted
Wars have never been won before they started
You'll never love someone 'til you're broken hearted

I think about you in that moment of truth
And I wonder if maybe my future will one day look like my past
(mmm)
But I suppose that the answer is, "no"
So I've got to find a way back just to tell myself that

Every moment that comes can be disregarded
You'll never love someone 'til you're broken hearted
Wars have never been won before they started
You'll never love someone 'til you're broken hearted

And white lies all come and separate us from the cruel truth we live
And long nights go ahead and take all the time that I can give

Every moment that comes can be disregarded
You'll never love someone 'til you're broken hearted
Wars have never been won before they started
You'll never love someone 'til you're broken hearted

Ooohhhh, ooohhhh, ooohhh, ahhhh
