

Giving You Reasons

Jon McLaughlin

I picture you in red
A smile that I know I'll never forget
Yours a life flying by
From outside I see you're lonely inside

I'm sorry long days came
I'm sorry you're not quite the same
And I'll take all my reasons home again
You'll have a reason
I'm giving you reasons again

There are times I'll admit
The seams of a life are tearing a bit
But that's all relative
When all that you know oh, it sums up to this

I'm sorry long days came
I'm sorry you're not quite the same
And I'll take all my reasons home again
You'll have a reason
I'm giving you reasons

A year from now, don't count me out
If I see you in a crowd
It's like I'm already there cause I feel it somehow
I'm used to you there, so get used to me now

Sorry long days came
I'm sorry you're not quite the same
And I'll take all my reasons home again
You'll have a reason
I'm giving you reasons again
