

If You Choose

Jonathan Thulin

It's the point of no return,
You made your choice and now it burns,
We see the future up ahead,
Where does it end, where does it end?

It's a momentary lapse,
Just a glimpse into your past,
You try to right your every wrong,
Where does that lead, where does it lead?

Does it hurt to say your wrong?
To be weak instead of strong?
If you just don't have enough,
Well then, receive and let go.

There is love enough for you,
Just hold on.
You can make it if you choose,
If you choose.

You've been giving up your chance,
Sitting down when you should dance.
Every door is open wide,
But you won't go through,
You won't go through.

If you want to live, then run,
Through the battle t'wards the sun.
Every colour will arise,
And you'll call it home,
You'll call it home.

You can rise out of this mess,
Come alive with nothing left,
You can fall out of the nest,
Just let the wind do the rest,
And let go...

There is love enough for you,
Just hold on.
You can make it if you choose,
If you choose.

There's a table,
That has been prepared for you,
If you only open up your heart,
You will find love.

You will find love,
And let go...

There is love enough for you,
Just hold on.
You can make it if you choose,
If you choose.
