

Older

Josh Baldwin

Older than the nightingale, older than the rain
In Your eyes a thousand years, like a single day
You were before the moon, before the stars
You were the song before the words were in my heart

Older than these broken dreams, older than our pain
At Your Word a promise stands, and it will never break
You made the seas and the waves, and You even let them part
You were the song before the words were in my heart

Beautiful Savior
What a wonderful thing
That when the world is changing
You are still the same

Older than a wounded world, older than the fall
There's a grace still at work, older than it all
You were the Word of Life that saved me from the start
You were the song before the words were in my heart
Yeah, You were the song before the words were in my heart
