

Late Night Driving

Josh Pyke

Late at night when I'm driving
I get the urge to let the engine idle
Turn the lights out and close my eyes
And I remember the ocean
I let the current take me out to the point of no return
And I swam back to the shore where I shivered like a bird

There's a point
There's a point
I know
There's a line that you could cross but then
You could never go home
There's a part of every heart that will forever be their own
And no one else can go

And I remember that feeling
I saw a look in your eyes I had never seen before
Saying if we don't do it now
We'll never do it at all

There's a point
There's a point
I know
There's a line that you could cross but then
You could never go home
There's a part of every heart that will forever be their own
And no one else can go

So we take the better part of valor
And we keep our little mysteries
But you were a line that I would cross every time
You'll always be a secret to me

There's a point
There's a point
I know
There's a line that you could cross but then
You could never go home
There's a part of every heart that will forever be their own
And there's a line that you could cross but then
You could never go home
And there's a point
I know
And there's a point
I know
