

Right In Front Of Me

Josh Wilson

Some say we've all been searching for a God for years in vain

And some say belief is just the easy way around our pain

And sometimes I'd like to agree when they're telling me that this is all an accident

Cause it's hard to let this heart believe when my mind is screaming out I need more evidence

But do I really need more evidence?

I want a miracle, something impossible

So would you help me to believe

When You say everything that's right in front of me

Is all the proof I'll ever need

I hear it in the winter wind that blows the icy snow against my skin

And I see it in that summer sun that rises high and then burns out again

And I feel it in my chest in the quiet moments that I trust in what You say

Would you help me trust in what You say?

Maybe this is what it means to question You and still believe

To search and still be satisfied, to know and yet to wonder why

To put my faith things I doubt, to love what I can't figure out

Maybe this is what it means

To want a miracle, something impossible

But have the faith to still believe

When You say everything that's right in front of me

Is all the proof I'll ever need

Don't need a miracle, something impossible

That makes You easy to believe

When You say everything that's right in front of me

Is all the proof I'll ever need

You're all the proof I'll ever need

So would you help me to believe
