

My Baby

Joshua Radin

When you came to me, crying from a dream, feeling so small, my baby.
I held you in my arms, kissed away the harm from your last fall, my baby.
Suddenly you see, how it's meant to be,
when you stand tall, my baby.
You and I know, flowers only grow when the rain falls, my baby.

Like a runaway train,
like your face in the rain,
like a star so far away,
you can't know from where it came.
Like the winter snow,
like the way you know,
by the way we said good bye on the day of our first hello,
I will love you.

Sleep beneath the moon, watching it consume a new day, my baby.
Though your eyes are tired from wanting with desire in a new way, my baby.
Lying with you seems like waking from a dream, when you say, my baby.
Everything before left me wanting more, so I'll stay, your baby.

Like a runaway train,
like your face in the rain,
like a star so far away,
you can't know from where it came.
Like the winter snow,
like the way you know,
by the way we said good bye on the day of our first hello,
I will love you.

Still you are holding on,
to memories that are gone, while I need, my baby.
And I can try to make,
you give me what you take,
but I don't steal, my baby.
So if you wanna show, how you really know what I feel, my baby.
Then let me start a new memory with you, and let us heal, my baby.

Like a runaway train,
like your face in the rain,
like a star so far away,
you can't know from where it came.
Like the winter snow,
like the way you know,
by the way we said good bye on the day of our first hello,
I will love you.
