

Everything Ends

JP Saxe

Our first conversation, we got to it quick
Skipped past the small talk and right to the heaviest shit
Like addiction in my family tree
Your predisposition for people who leave

You told me I don't look a thing like your past
It felt like the highest of compliments I'd ever had
And we named every dog in the park
And kissed like we knew it was us from the start

Oh, I wouldn't change a thing

Remember when we'd still been in more cities than weeks
A few minutes at most would go by between times that we'd speak
And I'd fly across the country to spend
Just a night, trying to keep quiet on a tour bus bed

Laughing at the vastly different sizes of our heads
If I could be anywhere, I'd still be here instead
Maybe if my memory was better
I'd be less afraid of losing what I can't remember

Oh, I wouldn't change a thing

Everything ends
Everything ends except us
Everything ends
Everything ends except us

Everything ends except us
Everything ends
Everything ends except us
