

Guess It Was Me

Julian Lennon

Why don't you see everything's clear?
I shout and scream but still you don't hear
Can't you comprehend the words that I use?
Do you expect me to paint a picture of truth?
I've got yesterday's smile on my face
My head in the sand
And a castle in outer space
I told the world that something was wrong
I guess it was me all along
I used to blame everyone else
For my misfortunes and lack of self
Now I can see my judgment was wrong
I find myself, now I am strong
Now I find the world's a different place
I just opened up my arms
And learned to love and embrace
I told the world that something was wrong
I had to learn my own way
I told the world that something was wrong
I guess it was me all along
When I thought everything was going fine
I couldn't see the cracks 'cause I was dreaming
[Incomprehensible]
Now this angel has fallen, now this angel has fallen
Now I find the world's a different place
I just opened up my arms
And learned to love and embrace
Learned to love and embrace
I told the world that something was wrong
I had to learn my own way
I told the world that something was wrong
Now I know it was me all along
I told the world
I had to learn my own way
I told the world
Now I know it was me