I thought I was really okay now
Like you said, I thought I forgot it all
Shaky nights and lost feelings
I endured through them, acting like I was busy and doing well

It's because it was raining, because I was drunk
I still make those excuses for not getting over you
You're not answering, which is your answer
But like a habit, I'm calling you again
I hate myself for this

It's not like I expect anything
I just want to be honest today
I missed you, I was curious about you
Because at one point, I shared my everything with you

It's because it was raining, because I was drunk
My friends curse at me, telling me to get over you
You're not answering, which is your answer
But like a habit, I'm calling you again
I hate myself for this

Honestly, I can't
I'm too young to erase you, who still remains in me

How can I forget you?
When you're still so clear?
To me, you're all four seasons packed into one day
It's because it's raining, just let me be today
I'm sure I'll regret this tomorrow
But I miss you so much
