

Thicker Than Dust

K.Flavy

Me and my friends, thicker than blood
Just trying to breathe something thicker than dust
I need to keep my mind, my mind moving on up
Because it's always rolling down, always rolling down

I'm in a brand new time zone, we got a whole new state of mind
Buzzing all high on a tight rope, eyes lit up like the Vegas sign
Nobody around got a husband, nobody around got a wife to call
Thinking about when I felt lovesick, doesn't really sound like a life at all
I'm in the mood for a plot twist, never cared what I'm supposed to be Fuck living life in an office, my eyes, no not focusing Wishing my future would carve out, bank notes and dinner plans
But we look better with the stars out, waking up to go to sleep again

Me and my friends, thicker than blood
Just trying to breathe something, thicker than dust
I need to keep my mind, my mind moving on up
Because it's always rolling down, always rolling down

I've got a brand new passion, we found a whole new way to see
Might spend a whole night smashing, wait for the blowback patiently
World never seemed like a fair place, bad people got the nicest things
Same shit playing on the airwaves, naked girls, diamond rings
All my life been a good kid, so what I got a broken car
Moved my shit out of Brooklyn, laughed out loud, fell apart
Money's overrated, sex ain't hard to find
We're not in love, since when is that a crime

Me and my friends, thicker than blood
Just trying to breathe something, thicker than dust
I need to keep my mind, my mind moving on up
Because it's always rolling down, always rolling down

I thank God, feeling warmer, getting closer
All we've got, push it further, almost over
One last sip, kiss me like you really mean it
Times like this, I want something to believe in

Me and my friends, thicker than blood
Just trying to breathe something, thicker than dust
I need to keep my mind, my mind moving on up
Because it's always rolling down, always rolling down
