The Act of Darkening

Katatonia

So dark Once an amusement park Troubled whispers sound On a mute merry-go-round

So cold Once a playground of gold Caved in long ago And then poisoned with the snow

Oceans of time Broken patterns align Hearts washed upon the isle

It carries your name Like radiance in the rain The wailing sirens alarm

Old memories hang on and gravitate by weights of sorrow Through cracks and wounds our pain reflected in a thousand mirr ors It is time for deeds to take the shape of vows and codes of pro mise The time to let our minds speak silently in the act of darkenin g

Out of reach and gone from view Now light is one step behind you On the other side of the soul The void resolves one final role

Collapse into absence
