

No Shelter

Katie Costello

Where do we lose ourselves in the winter months?
Where do we find ourselves when there's no shelter for us?

How can we cry when there's no way to make amends?
How can we fight when there's no lesson in the end?

You just tell yourself there's something to be found
Beneath that molten rock buried deep underground
When the cold is coming, you're stuck in the shade
And there's no one left to blame

Where do we go when all the birds have gone north?
Where do we stay when the snow has taken over us?

How can we scream when there's no way to make amends?
How can we lie when there's no lesson in the end?

You just tell yourself there's something to be found
Beneath that molten rock buried deep underground
When the cold is coming, you're stuck in the shade
And there's no one left to blame

I'm going somewhere where I know I can stay
I'm going somewhere where I feel a better, a better change

You just tell yourself there's something to be found
Beneath that molten rock buried deep underground
When the cold is coming, you're stuck in the shade
Though there's no one else around
Though there's no one else around
Though there's no one else around