

Tundra

Keldian

the blanket of the long winter fell upon my soul locked away inside, what did I do to end up here? and in the numbness of my state, the approaching dawn but I am still so far away, so far away

In the rage of a mountain's memory like a dream of eternal fury, tundra you can try but you cannot reach me for my heart is buried deep in the tundra the chill of the endless night pierced into my mind locked away outside, what did I do to deserve this?

and in the darkness of my thoughts, the aurora lights
but I am still so far away, so far away

In the rage of a mountain's memory
like a dream of eternal fury, tundra
you can try but you cannot reach me
for my heart is buried deep in the tundra

all my life I have felt the longing for the touch when the ice is breaking, tundra for the sound when the ground is shaking and my heart is coming loose from the tundra there's a light on the faint horizon coming through to the bones in prison, tundra to the edge of the frozen daybreak at the end of the world there's no more tundra