When did I get these memories
These big ones I can't remember?
Out of what I just can't recall

There's one thing I remember pretty well

Try one more time, a hundred times
All I remember is your face
And yet you yourself, I'm not sure why
But I still can't remember you

The belt line wraps the globe
Going 'round to chase the morning sun
But we don't need to run its rails
We follow our desire, and chase the night

Try one more time, a thousand times
All I remember is your face
Light rain settles on my eyelids
And I still can't hear that dead, dark voice

Not knowing anything at all
Well, that won't hurt you - will it?
It makes me unable to sleep even still
And if you found out, I bet you'd laugh

When I'd try to count all the simple feelings
I'd find I forgot even the warmth you shared with me
Goodbye, and we'll never, ever meet again
That's just what feeling I get, that's just what I thought
I can't smile wide, I'm stuck, there's nothing I can do

It's like the hole in a donut
Just like you can't isolate the hole
Proving you were really here
Is something I can never do

Try one more time, a hundred times
All I remember is your face
One more night I sleep
Body wedged between the blanket and bed

If there really were thoughts that never die
Would that give us relief?
I can't hope on things that have passed
So just give me something to fill with

When I'd try to count all the feelings I lost
I'd find I forgot even the voice you shared with me
Goodbye, and we'll never, ever meet again
That's just what feeling I get, that's just what I thought
The tears come pouring out, there's nothing I can do

The hole opened up in my chest
Now it's the only thing that proves you
And yet I'm still so empty
My heart is torn to ribbons, there's nothing I can do

When I'd try to count all the simple feelings
I'd find I forgot even the warmth you shared with me
Goodbye, and we'll never, ever meet again

In the end, I remembered that little word
Taking my breaths calmly, my eyes opened up

My eyes opened up... My eyes opened up...
Your name is...
