It's strange how well I remember
The airplane I once saw flying effortlessly above
There's no real reason
It just sticks with me

In the evening, after I spent the whole day a crying mess
I wished for nothing but to be stronger
I was searching for
The courage I would need to achieve that goal

Even if a cruel fate has been carved in stone
Poised to reveal itself before me someday
As long as I have a moment, this moment, where I can breathe
I can hold on to the feeling that none of it really matters

Someone inside me is singing
"Go the distance
Go the distance once more!"
With a passion that I can't deny

Your eyes are always swollen with tears
But I'll keep smiling so you'll never have to be sad again
The song I hear encourages me to be that kind of hero
I'll throw up a peace sign
Rolling this story along

I couldn't say I wanted to protect you
You weren't that weak
But I was even weaker
You were always someone important to me

I've been changing ever since that day
When I yelled, "I'll go on living alone!"
So go ahead and laugh
Laugh, because I'm afraid of being alone

Even if I'm kicking, biting, unable to breathe
And the depths of my rioting head and stomach are a gushy mess
I can almost forget about struggling to impress everyone
That's how much I want to be there, feeling your heart

Someday
I'm sure our hands
Will reach the far-off sun
Let's attain the moment before daybreak, laughing aloud
We'll be dyed in a palely burning color
As we venture beyond this dim city
Joining hands, I bet we can run all the way through
I'll steal a future with you

Writing a story without any twists

Rowdy days spent covered in scabs
Worn-out days of scraping myself up and getting scraped
Your words bring them all back to me—they appear so vividly
My soul, still sleeping in its chrysalis
That dream, tossed aside still half-eaten
I'll take them all back once more

Someone inside me is singing
"Go the distance
Go the distance once more!"
With a passion that I can't deny
Your eyes are always swollen with tears
But I'll keep smiling so you'll never have to be sad again
The song I hear encourages me to be that kind of hero
I'll throw up a peace sign
Rolling this story along

I'll steal a future with you, writing a story without any twists
